

Karen Young

Karen Young is the President of LearnPro Inc, specializing in communications and training. Since 1989 she has provided writing, editing, and document design to business, government, and non-profit clients. Identifying a further need, she expanded the service to include formal training in marketing, communication, software, and soft-skills to business leaders.

Karen grew her communication and marketing business into an accredited business college, creating relevant training programs that prepared many hundreds of people for workplace success. As an advocate for charitable work, she has volunteered on Boards of Directors with municipal and provincial government, the Arts, and Business organizations and committees. She has written three books to date on fundraising for NPOs and on personal development topics.

Awards: Paul Harris Fellow (service), Rotary; Woman of The Year (leadership) the Business and Professional Woman's Association, Fraser Valley.

Karen lives near Vancouver, BC, close to her three children and three grandchildren. She enjoys reading mystery novels, exploring new ideas, and time spent with loved ones.
